With electrodes a-b widely separated, and with A-B separated an inch or two, demonstrate that one obtains a long but "lean" spark. With a-b in contact, which connects the capacitors, demonstrate that the spark is not only long but also "fat."

The action of the electrostatic machine is much the same as repeatedly depositing the charge induced on the plate of the electrophorus onto a conductor.